About April's Cover

"Fernus Legumi", © 2019 Steven Vincent Johnson

This month's cover was brought to by an amazing graphics package called Apophysis. To all you nerds out there, check out apophysis.org. It is a freeware fractal flame editor for Windows. Sturgeon's law states that 90% everything is crap. That most definitely applies to attempts at generating aesthetically pleasing fractal flames. This was one of the more successful algorithms. I turned it into a greeting card. My hard drive is littered with the graves of the 90%. And, yes, I go through a lot of black ink. Expensive!

Hello NITEL! With I could pronounce your actual name, but I don't have the vocal chords nor the hearing range to appreciate the experience. Please note check box "Memory Wipe of the Sampling Experience" remains UNCHECKED! No want the specimen to remember everything so that he will talk... and he WILL talk to anyone willing to listen to him. It ought to give our program another 20 years of plausible deniability. Hope to see you at our private foreign exchange Christmas party at Camp David next week. How are your granddaddy's high... Our offspring, they grow so fast, don't they! Use Cynthia's patented get's
Please send holograms of the little darlings.

Complements from Vince Dingalint

I asked my old friend, Vince Dingalint to bring me something interesting from the future. He handed me a document retrieved from a FOIA request. Vince retrieved it from the year, 2050. Before he left for parts unknown Vince told me to go pop some popcorn. The most crucial drama of all concerning our POTUS is about to heat up.

Final comments

I'm getting back into the swing of my Orbital Mechanics work. Lots of hard work remains. The matter of building computer animation models continues to intimidate me. Working on CLOVIS and elaborating on controversial speculation of our alien origins was the therapeutic break I sorely needed from the OM routine.

I'd be happy to reply to further commentary some might have on the CLOVIS or UFO enigma, or the controversial Abduction matter. Agree or disagree, or offer up your own theories or suspicions. God knows, I have tried to articulate my own conundrums. But as far as TURBO is concerned, I don't feel a need to continue stirring a stick in that fire. Should I feel deprived I can get my UFO/ET "fix" elsewhere.
