The Reign of Zoey

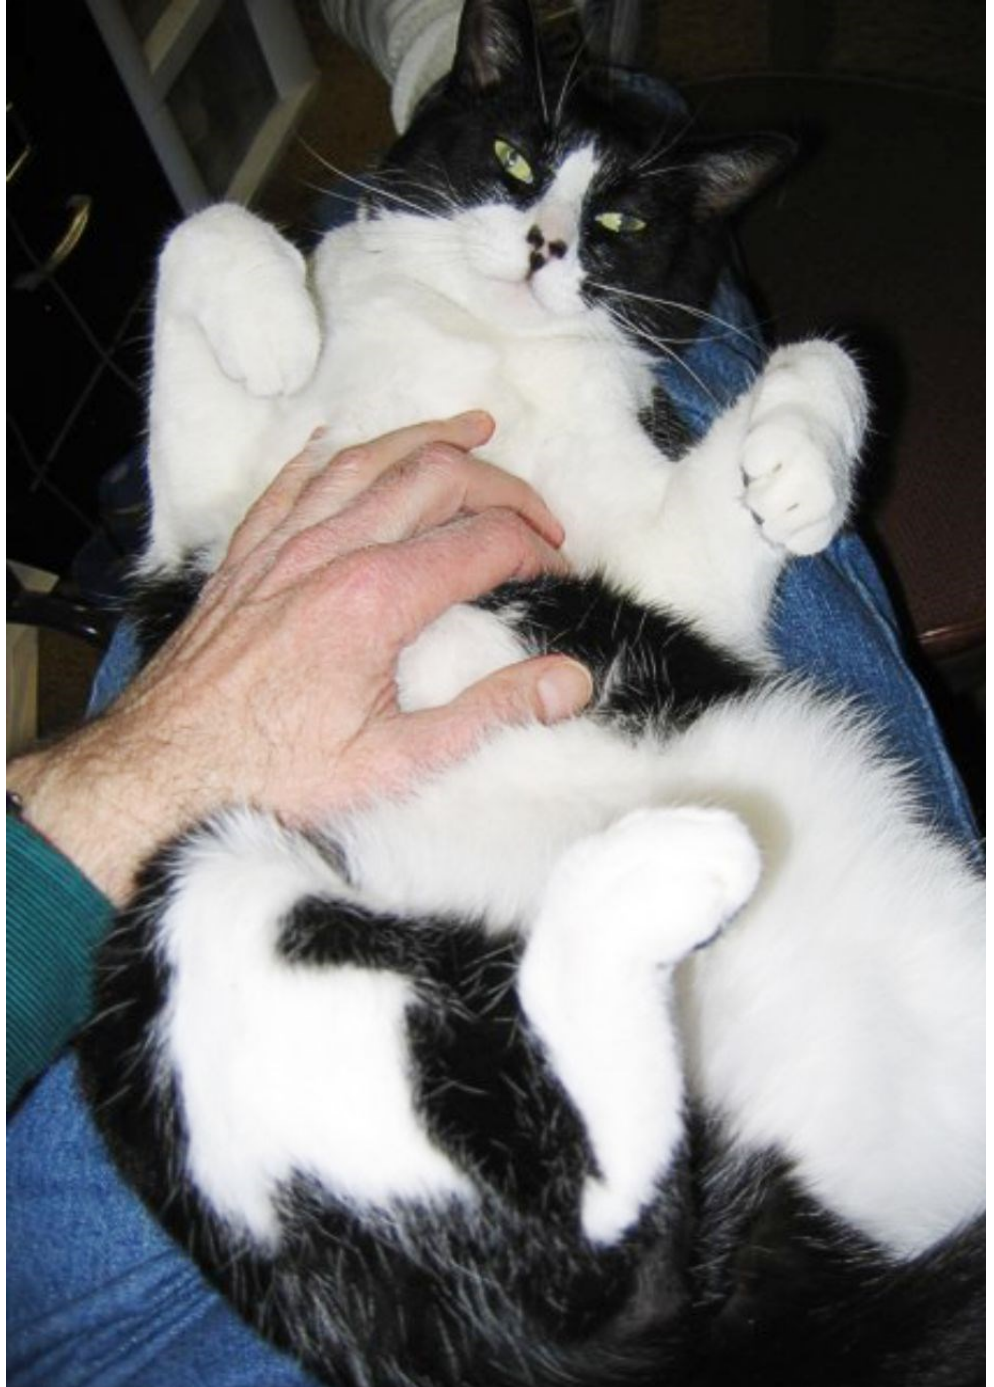

Facebook mates learned Zoey passed away peacefully on September 9, Friday, cradled in Darlene's arms. Her kidneys had failed. She wouldn't make it through weekend without a lot of suffering. Our vet injected the first shot, a sedative, and within a minute Zoey began slowly lowering her head, eventually resting it on Darlene's arms, fast asleep. The second shot stopped her heart. We buried Zoey in our back yard with a sprig of catnip, tip-money for the boatman's ferry crossing to Rainbow Bridge. Zoey now joins the other cats we have loved and served throughout our lives. I mourn her loss, as does Darlene. We had more than 17 full years of attending to her chin rubs and nibbles. Out of the corner of my eye I can still catch furtive glimpse of her snoring in a cat tree.

Oyez! Oyez! Oyez The tree reign of Zoey has passed.

Who now dares to climb our Cat Trees?
